

Social Studies Amendment

Social studies licensure includes the following core academic subjects: civics and government, economics, history, geography.

Junior high and middle school social studies teachers who have passed the PRAXIS II 0089 “Middle School: Social Studies” exam are highly qualified.

High school social studies teachers who have passed the PRAXIS II 10081 “Social Studies: Content Knowledge” exam are highly qualified.

Veteran junior high, middle and secondary social studies teachers, who have not otherwise met the definition of highly qualified, use the HOUSSE rubric to globally assess civics and government, economics, history, and geography. They do not assess individually each core academic subject. If they earn 100 points on the HOUSSE rubric, they are highly qualified.
